

THE Massachusetts CALENDAR; OR, AN ALMANAC,
For the Year of our LORD, 1772.

The BOSTON MASSACRE, perpetrated on March the 5th, 1770.

WHILE BRITONS view this scene with conscious dread,
And pay the last sad tribute to the dead ;
What though the shafts of justice faintly gleam,
And ermin'd miscreants ridicule the scene ;
Ne'er let one breast the generous sigh disclaim,
Or cease to bow at FREEDOM's hallow'd fane ;
Still with the thought let Fame's loud Clarion swell,
And Fate to diffuse o'er the MURDER all

Kind Reader.

AS I have neither room nor time, and look upon it more the part of the Reader than the Author to judge of any Literary Production, I have no disposition to amuse you with a long recommendatory Preface, being satisfied that if it is not answerable to the recommendation, it only makes the author appear in a disadvantageous light. I would only inform you, with regard to this Almanack, which is my first performance of this kind, that I have endeavoured to make my calculations as accurate as possible, and to insert whatever else I thought would be most useful. If this my endeavour should prove any ways useful to the Public, it answers my highest expectation. The author, if he is approved of in this capacity, by a quick and large sale, perhaps, another year may be induced to furnish the public with a PROVINCIAL REGISTER.

ECLIPSES, in the Year 1772.

THERE will be six Eclipses this year, all invisible, in the following order, viz.

The first of the Sun, April 3d, 35 minutes after twelve o'clock in the morning.

The second of the Moon, April 17th, 11h. 20 minutes in the forenoon.

The third of the Sun, May the 2d, 4 h. 59 minutes, in the afternoon, invisible by reason of the Moon's south latitude.

The fourth of the Sun, September 26th, invisible, because it happens 7 h. 41 m. afternoon.

The fifth of the Moon, October 11th, happening 12 h. 42 m. afternoon, of consequence invisible.

The sixth and last of the Sun, October 26th, 5 h. 6 m. in the morning, and therefore invisible.

Vulgar Notes, for the Year 1772.

The DIFFERENCE between To-DAY and To-MORROW.

TO Day man's dress'd in gold and silver bright,
Wrapt in a shroud before To Morrow's night:
To-Day he's feeding on delicious food,
To-Morrow dead, unable to do good:
To-Day he's nice, and scorns to feed on crumbs,
To-Morrow he's himself a dish for worms:
To-Day he's grand, majestic, all delight:
Gastful and pale before To-Morrow night:
True as the scriptures say, Man's life's a span,
The present moment is the Life of Man.

Of TIME.

TIME of itself is nothing, but from thought
Receives its rise, by labouring fancy wrought
From things consider'd, whilst we think on some
As present, some as past, or yet to come,
No Thought can think on Time, that's still confess'd,
But thinks on things in motion or at rest.

On PRIDE.

PRIDE is the Leprosy of the soul, the bane of friendship,
The plague of earth, and detestation of Heaven:
It is the vortex of hell, the triumph of Lucifer,
And Shibboleth of the infernal crew.
It is a perfidious inmate, tyrannical and oppressive,
And, like a serpent, when irritated will wound itself;
Like bubbles inflated with air, the more
It swells, the sooner it bursts.
Pride is the Root of confusion, the apex of folly
And centre of Delusion.

I. JANUARY, hath XXXI Days.

THE keener tempest comes, and fuming dun
From all the livid East, or piercing North,
Thick clouds ascend: In whose capacious womb
A vap'ry deluge lies, to snow congeal'd.

OF LIBERTY and GOVERNMENT.

THERE is nothing more common than to have a clear and distinct Notion of particular Things, considered separately; and yet, when one happens to join them, and to make them of a complex Nature, Darkness and Obscurity instantly arise. It seems to be like the Mixture of certain Liquors, which in themselves are very translucent and clear: But as soon as they come to be mixed, they instantly grow opaque, and dark.

The Notion of Liberty seems to be of this Kind: It is clear enough of itself; and so is that of Government: But yet when we come to consider these together, and to think of them as connected; it is not easy to define what Liberty is, or to say exactly to what it extends. Liberty consists in a Power to act, or not, as every Man pleases: It is a State of Independency on the Will of any other. But then Government supposes a Man is debared of the Power of acting as he pleases; nay, it supposes his Actions are and must be directed by certain prescribed Rules, laid down by Superiours, to whom a legislative Power is given. The very Entrance therefore into Society, or Government, is an Abridgment of Liberty.

The Way to consider what Branches of natural Liberty are given up, and what remain to us, after our Admission into Society, is, to consider the Ends for which Men enter into a State of Government: For so much Liberty only is departed from as is necessary to secure those Ends; the rest is to be deemed our own still. In a State of Nature, I had a Right to read Homer, or Virgil, or Horace, in order to instruct or amuse myself; and therefore under a Government instituted to support my Life, and Property, and civil Interests, I retain my Liberty to read them still. For from what Source can such a Society derive a Right to hinder my Studies, Recreations, or Amusements, which do not effect the Ends of the Society? To restrain therefore the free Use of the Scriptures; to prohibit Men the reading of them; to make it penal to examine and search them; is a manifest Usurpation upon the common Rights of Mankind, and is as much a Violation of natural Liberty, as the Attack of a Highwayman upon the Road can be upon our civil Rights.

We retain then a Liberty in such Cases in which we have not expressly parted with it, i. e. in all such Cases as have no Relation to the Ends of such Society as we enter into: And much more do we retain, because we cannot but retain, our Liberty in all Rights that are impossible to be alienated. Wherever there are Duties incumbent upon ourselves which cannot be performed by others for us, or by ourselves for others, there we cannot transfer such Duties to any others whatever.

There is another Branch of Liberty, which I know not whether I should consider as a natural Right retained: It rather seems to be acquired acquired by entering into Society. I mean that which every Member of Society has, to speak his Sentiments openly concerning such Matters as affect the Good of the Whole. When any Man makes himself a Member of a Community, he becomes concerned for the Whole, as well as for his particular Part : He ventures his Life and Fortune upon the same Bottom ; and is perpetually interested in its good or ill Success. Wherever therefore he perceives a Rock upon which there is a probability that the Vessel may split ; or if he sees a Shoal, or Sand that may swallow it up ; or if he foresees a Storm likely to arise ; his Interest is too deeply concerned not to give Notice of the Danger : and the Right he has to his Life and Property, gives him a Right to speak his Sentiments. If the Pilot of the Ship refuses to hear, or if the Captain will take no Notice, yet it is certain they acquire no Right to punish the well-meant Information, nor to stop the Mouth of him who thinks he describes Danger to the whole Ship's Crew.

A MAN of PLEASURE.

A MAN of pleasure is a child of folly, an unbridled animal, a court savage, the dupe of fancy, slave of vice, and foe of reason ; he is the lord of dissipation, the crutch of avarice, and bane of innocence, fastened to effeminacy on the lap of maternal indulgence, and flushed with the polish of superficial embellishments ; he shudders at the rigid discipline of virtue, and shrinks at the thought of ascending the hill of manly science, though for the repast of angels. He treads upon ice, tramples upon property, deifies the brute, and dances blindfold upon a precipice. His breath is contagious, his friendship a snare, self his centre, and his creed annihilation.

A WOMAN of PLEASURE.

A FINE woman of pleasure is an angel incrusted, the pink of fashions, the mirror of vanity, and vortex of mischief.

She has a Siren's voice, a crocodile's tears, and a peacock's pride.

Like a sun beam in the clouds, she is gay, fickle, and delusive ; common as the air, inconstant as the wind, and consuming as fire.

She is like a poisonous variegated flower, raised in a hot bed, and grafted on a rose bud,

Though smooth as oyl to the mouth, she is hellebore to the brain, and arsenick to the bowels.

Like the insidious spider, she extends her net, sucks so death unwary fugitives, and triumphs in the destruction of thousands.

She resembles a light painted frigate, without helm or ballast, with colours streaming, and a rotten bottom, under full sail to destruction, where, froth, stench, and darkness, close the scene.

Thoughts

THOUGHTS ON GOVERNMENT.

By the famous WILLIAM PENN.

GOVERNMENT has many shapes; but there is sovereignty, though not freedom, in all of them.

Rex and Tyrannus are very different characters; one rules his people by laws to which they consent; the other, by his absolute will and power. That is called freedom, this tyranny.

The first is endangered by the ambition of the populace, which shakes the constitution; the other by an ill administration, which hazards the tyrant and his family.

It is great wisdom in princes of both sorts not to strain points too high with their people: for whether the people have a right to oppose them or not, they are ever sure to attempt it when things are carried too far, though the remedy oftentimes proves worse than the disease.

Happy that King who is great by justice, and that people who are free by obedience.

Where the ruler is just, he may be strict; else it is two to one, it turns upon him, and though he should prevail, he can be no gainer, where his people are the losers.

Princes must not have passions in government, nor resent beyond interest and religion.

Where example keeps pace with authority, power hardly fails to be obeyed, and magistrates to be honoured.

Let the people think they govern, and they will be governed. This cannot fail, if those they trust are trusted.

That prince that is just to them in great things, and humours them sometimes in small ones, is sure to have and keep them from all the world:

For the people is the politick wife of the prince, that may be better managed by wisdom than ruled by force.

But where the magistrate is partial, and serves ill turns, he loses his authority with the people, and gives the populace opportunity to gratify their ambitions; and so lays a stumbling block for his people to fall.

It is true, that were a subject more popular than the prince, the prince is in danger; but it is as true, that it is his own fault; for nobody has the like means, interest, or reason, to be so popular as he.

It is an unaccountable thing, that some princes incline rather to be feared than loved, when they see that fear does not oftener secure a prince against the dissatisfaction of his people, than love makes a subject too many for such a prince.

Certainly, service upon inclination is like to go farther than obedience upon compulsion.

The Romans had a just sense of this when they placed Optimus before before Maximus, to their most illustrious captains and Cæsars !

Besides, experience tells us, that goodness raises a nobler passion in the soul, and gives a better sense of duty, than severity.

What did Bharash get by increasing the Israelites task ? Ruin to himself in the end.

As often as rulers endeavour to attain just ends by just mediums, they are sure of a quiet and easy government ; and as sure of convulsions where the nature of things are violated, and their order over-ruled.

It is certain, princes ought to have great allowances made them for faults in government, since they see by other people's eyes, and hear by their ears. But ministers of state, their immediate confidants and instruments, have much to answer for, if, to gratify private passions, they misguide the Prince to do public injury.

Ministers of state should undertake their posts at their peril. If princes over-rule let them shew the law and humbly resign : if fear, gain, or flattery prevail, let them answer it to the last.

The prince cannot be preserved but where the minister is punishable : for people as well as princes will not endure imperium in imperio.

If ministers are weak or ill men, and so spoil their places, it is the prince's fault that chose them : but if their places spoil them, it is their own fault to be made worse by them,

It is but just that those that reign by their princes should suffer for their princes : for it is a safe and necessary maxim, not to shift hands in government, while the heads are in being that should answer for them.

And yet it were intolerable to be a minister of state, if every body may be accuser and judge.

Let therefore the false accuser no more escape an exemplary punishment than the guilty minister.

For it profanes government to have the credit of leading men in it subject to vulgar censure, which is often ill grounded.

The safety of a prince therefore consists in a well chosen council ; and that only can be said to be so, where the persons that compose it are qualified for the business that comes before them.

Let there be merchants for trade, seamen for the Admiralty, travellers for foreign affairs, some of the leading men of the country for home business, and common and civil lawyers to advise of loyalty and right ; who should always keep to the strictest rules of law.

Three things contribute much to ruin governments, looseness, oppression, and envy.

Where the reins of government are too slack, the manners of the people are corrupted ; and that destroys industry, begets effeminacy and provokes heaven against it.

Oppression makes a poor country, and a desperate people who always wait an opportunity to change.

He

He that ruleth over men must be just ruling in the fear of God, said an old and a wise king.

Envy disturbs and distracts government, clogs the wheels, and perplexes the administration: and nothing contributes more to the disorder than a partial distribution of rewards and punishments in the sovereign.

As it is not reasonable that man should be compelled to serve, so those that have employments should not be endured to leave them humbly.

Where the state intends a man no affront, he should not affront the state.

Memoirs of the CULTURE of SILK.

ABOUT 2500 Years before Christ, the Empress Siling began the Culture of Silk in China, where it was confined near 2000 Years, before it reached India and Persia.

A. D. 555. This silk Culture first brought into Greece, particularly Athens, Thebes and Corinth.

1130 Roger, King of Sicily, established it at Palermo and Calabria, by Workmen brought from Athens and Corinth, at the Time of the Crusades.

1000 The Italians received it from Sicily.

1000 It was established in France.

1740 Began in America. The best Levant Silk is brought from Shirvan, and the other Northern Provinces of Persia, about the Caspian Sea, the same Climate as these Provinces. In Italy, One Hundred Mulberry Trees, well grown are worth 100 l. Sterling per Annum.-- That part of the Imperial Revenue in China paid in Silk, amounts to above 955,000 l. Troy, and perhaps this is not the twentieth Part of the Produce of that Empire. One Million of Trees disposed into Mulberry Walks, in these Provinces, would in a few Years, enable a yearly Remittance to Great Britain of a Million Sterling, and no ways interfere with the other necessary Branches of Labour in the Community.

JONATHAN WEATHERWISE'S Prognostics.

AS it is not likely that I have a long Time to act on the Stage of this Life, (for what with Head-achs, hard Labour, Storms and broken Spectacles, I feel my Blood chilling, and Time, that greedy Tyrant, devouring my whole Constitution) so I have weighed the Matter with great Prudence, and am resolved to enter without Delay on this important Business of eternising my Memory, but at the same Time having the greatest View to the Benefit of my dear Country.

What put me more immediately upon this Scheme was, the Season of the Year. This is what pointed out to me the Road to Immortality :

mortality : We are now entering into Winter Quarters, and doubtless shall all be glad to know what we are to expect from the three bustling Months : Indeed, I imagine it will be to little Purpose to divulge the Secrets of Nature for the approaching Season, since it is rather too late to guard against it, but yet I think it most proper to see the Prognosticks of a cold Winter published, with my own Eyes as well knowing that if I entrust my Manuscripts with any of my Children, that either Rates may destroy them or some other Accidents deprive Posterity of so peculiar an Advantage : Besides if we are like to meet with hard Fare in the three following Months, I shall endeavour to make them as tolerable as I can, so as to afford some Comfort in the Prospect ; for it is to no Purpose to make the worst of any thing that can't be helped.

I shall therefore now begin with some of those Signs of a hard Winter which are but partially known, and shall make my Remark upon them as they Regard the approaching Season, and then I shall raise a few which belong to my Observation alone, for I am very positive there is not one Person on Earth besides my self that ever made them.

The first Prognostick then, is what the Whale-Men take Notice of, viz. That if the three last Days in October are cold, the three Winter Months will be so too : Whale Men to be sure are useful Members of Society, especially as they regard the New England Trade, therefore I would pay all Deference imaginable to their Judgment my self, and I think the whole Community ought to regard it too : This Sign seems to promise a severe Winter at Hand ; but I beg Leave to remark, that the first of the three Days was quite pleasant till 10 o'Clock in the Forenoon, and then it held Cold till 34 Minutes past eleven next Morning, when it began to be warm, and continued so until sunset ; then the cool returned and lasted all the next Day : So that from this Prognostick, December will be pleasant untill towards the Middle of it, when the Weather will alter cold and keep in that State untill about the 12th of January when it will change to Warm again and be very pleasant untill February, which will be a cold Month ; But notwithstanding this Exactness, I hope it will not be so bad as I fear, for being obliged to set up all the first Night with Company, and drinking pretty freely, my Pores were opened, and kept so during the whole Time, that I was more sensible of the Cold than I should have otherwise been ; and I know but of two Persons more upon whose Judgment I can depend that were so critical as myself, one of whom was just recovered of a severe Fit of Sickness, and the other was on the first of November hove down with an Ague, so that I imagine they were not proper Judges in the Affair, such Persons always being more affected with a change of Weather, than those who are in high Health.

The next Prognostic is that of the Goose-Bone : In Proportion to the Blackness

Blackness of it, so will the Severity of the Season be. I have heard Persons pretend to Skill in this Bone, but I am amazed at their Conceit when I see them examine it. I remember in particular, the last Winter was calculated to be very Cold by most of these Pedants in Ausertin, but we are all sensible it was one of the finest Winters that was ever known: I told those Persons it would be so, but they were too opinionated to believe me. The only way to be just in this Observation, is to keep close to the following Rules, viz. The Goose must be a wild one; hatched in the Month of May; and killed with Swan Shot on the 27th of September; when the Breast-Bone is well censed from the Flesh, you must calculate from the Forepart of it and so on towards the Tail-part: Some Persons indeed begin at the Tail-part and go back towards the Fore-part, but you may as well imagine February to happen before December as to calculate in that Manner. I should have communicated my Sentiments upon this Sign, with regard to this Winter, but the Man I had engaged to kill me a Goose, was confined by the Gout, so that the Publick must suffer by his Misfortune.

BEARS leaving the Woods and coming down among us, is another Prognostick of a hard Winter. Their Instinct, to be sure, informs them of the Season, and when they grow fat and good natured they take a Trip this Way either to tell us to take Care of ourselves if it is like to be cold, or to spend the Winter with us, if there is a Prospect of pleasant Weather. As to these Animals I have heard but of one taken as yet and he was murdered before he could have an Opportunity of delivering his Errand, and since the News-Papers have mentioned no others itinerating among us as yet (for common Reports I give no Credit to) I am in great Hopes it won't go hard with us.

As to the Number of Quails and Partridges (the last Prognostick I shall mention) it requires the nicest Judgment to determine upon their Appearance; and unless they appear in very large Flocks, it will be of no more Consequence than if there were none at all. It is true, we have had great Flights of them this Year, but I am very apt to think they have got Scent of a French War, and imagining there may be an Expedition to Canada very soon (for that is the Country they come from) they know that the French will be hard put to it for Provision by Sea, and that they must fall a Prey to their Necessities: Besides, as they are Birds that are remarkable for Delicacy, they are well acquainted with the Custom of the French of keeping their Guts in till they sink, and they think it very indecent to be treated in that Manner.

I have several other general Observations to communicate which I must reserve to another Paper, as I am afraid of tiring my Readers at Present: I shall finish this with but one of my own, which I am satisfied is peculiar to my self, because I never heard of any other Person that had the same Occasion to make it. It relates to

Grey-Squirrels.-----It will be necessary to tell the whole Story, which may possibly give more Light in the Case. The Story is this--- My Grandmother was a Woman of great Reputation in this Country at the first settling of it: She descended from the noble Family of the Weatherwises in the West of England; a Family who signalised themselves in the Reign of William the Conqueror: She was a helpful Woman among the Sick, and I have often heard her say she had walked 20 Miles to a Lecture; She carried on the business of making Cheesecakes and Tarts (the best Trade in New-England about 50 Years ago:) She was always very fond of me, though I was the prettiest Boy in the Country, and never did she draw a Batch out of that blessed Oven, but I had a Part of it: In short she had so many clever Ways of working on my Affections that I loved her dearly: It happened one Day as she was playing with a Grey Squirrel of mine, which she had given me a Silver Six pence to buy, that the snappish Cur bit the Top of her little Finger; she unhappily neglected it, it festered, gangrened and at last she died of her Wound. My Loss was so sensible that I swore revenge on every Grey Squirrel I could find, and set apart one Day in every Year to Destroy these Vermine; the Day I fixed upon was the 22d of October. Nothing hindred my shooting Frolick for nine and Forty Years successively, except Sundays, when I made the next Day serve as well: I had often observed that when I had treed them and shot them from an high Limb, they would put their Tails in their Mouths, as they were tumbling, and die in that Manner; I did not know what to make of it, untill in Process of Time I found that when they did so a hard Winter always succeeded; and this may be depended upon as infallible: This Year indeed I could not go a Shooting, for it is well known that the great Storm happened on my hunting Day, which was Saturday, and Sunday generally following Saturday, there must of Consequence one Day intervene, which necessarily prevents an accurate Observation. Thus, I have offered what I think may be Useful to my native Place and establish my Character.

I am the Publick's most obedient humble Servant,
November 5th. JONATHAN WEATHERWISE.

Yet seen too oft, familiar to the face,
We first endure, then pity, then embrace.

A New

A NEW, and curious TABLE showing in a concise manner, how to cast the simple Interest at six per cent. on any sum of money, for almost any time from one month, to 16 years, and 8 months, when the principal doubles.

Years.	Months.	Multiply.	Divide.	Years.	Months.	Multiply.	Divide.	EXPLANATION
	1		10 & 20	4	8	7	5 & 5	The 1st column is the time, the 2d shews the figures by which you must multiply your principal, the 3d shew the figures by which you are to divide the product of your multiplication.
	2		10 10	5		3	10	Example 1st.
	3	3	10 20	5	2½	5	4	Tell me the interest of 200l for one month;
	4		5 10	5	3	7	10	look for 1 month in the 1st column against it in the same line in the division column you will find 10 and 20, which are the figures by which you are to divide the principal, thus
	5		4 10	5	4	8	5	10) 200
	6	3	10 10	5	6	3	10	20) 20
	7	7	10 20	5	10	7	4	Ans. 1l.
	8		5 5	6		9	5	thus you find the interest of 200l. to be 1l. or 20s.
	9	9	10 20	6	3	3	8	The interest of any sum for one month is just a 200th part of the principal, therefore dividing by 200, or by 10 & 20, gives the answer, and shews the reason

If any other Rate per Cent is wanted, which is often the Case in casting Insurance, it may be readily found. Suppose $4\frac{1}{2}$ per. cent, having found by this Rule at 6 per cent. it is $\frac{3}{4}$ of the same; if 5 per cent. deduct $\frac{1}{6}$, if 7 per cent. add $\frac{1}{6}$, &c. &c.

The foregoing Table has been revised and corrected by Mr. J LEACH, Teacher of the Mathematics in Boston.

CHRISTIAN, VII. King of Denmark

HAIL DENMARK's pride ! whose country joys to own
Such noble virtues as surround thy throne !
Whose worth, not copied from a Kindred's clime,
To thy blest subjects bodes much happier time :
Whose royal heart with thoughts of pity blest'd,
Shall scorn to see, but ease them when distress'd :
What happier times can mortals wish to prove,
Than Kings made joyful in their subjects love.

ISAIAH THOMAS, hereby notifies the Public, that he carries on the PRINTING BUSINESS in all its branches, at the New Printing-Office, in Union-street, Boston; whoever pleases to employ him in this capacity, may depend upon being served on reasonable terms, with fidelity and dispatch and in a genteel manner. At the same place may be had,

The MASSACHUSETTS SPY,

A weekly, political and commercial Paper, open to All Parties, but influenced by None; printed on very large paper, each page containing four columns, though at the small price of 6s. and 8d. lawful money per annum. Any persons in the country, by sending a line and inclosing half a year's pay, with their names and places of abode, may depend upon being punctually served every week according to their directions. The great progress this paper has made in the small space of seven months, renders it needless to give it a character.

B O O K S.
